

THE INTERACTIVE SOVEREIGN SOCIETY

“Collectively developing and respecting a set of principles of lawful conduct”

CONSENT SURVEY

Do you support having others in your society made to adhere to some form of lawful conduct?

The institution calling itself the Crown presumes lawful governance over you. In doing so, it defies no laws of your own wishing, as you have stated that you desire none.

Do you consent to the laws of the Crown, in recognition of its just claim of authority to impose those laws on individuals consensually under its governance?

YES

NO

Have you presented to your fellow human beings an alternate constitution for law to which you would consensually adhere?

YES

NO

If you encounter two other individuals, both of whom allege themselves to be sovereign as you do, who are in disagreement to a sufficiently discontent level that they are inclined to use force rather than reason to resolve their issue, are you inclined to assist the one that you believe is being treated less fairly?

YES

You will be governed. Consent is irrelevant.

4 – Refusal to consent denied

Please write the following words on a piece of paper: Your name, "Constitution", "I agree to do what I can to stop others from being treated unfairly."

Write these on three separate lines in very large lettering, sign and date it in the presence of two witnesses and also get their signatures and dates of signature at the bottom.

5 – Fairness consent

Congratulations. You have made the admirable decision to allow yourself to be held to a properly constituted basis for lawful conduct, in service of seeing respectful and fair society among those with whom you share it.

The Interactive Sovereign Society admires people like yourself and wishes to get to know you better. (We admire you a little less if you came in through door 1 or 4, but we still admire you.)

1 – Crown, default tacit consent

2 – Crown, informed consent

3 – Alternate consent
